| Information | In myPerspectives, culminating tasks connect assessment with learning in the texts. Reading and writing are integrated to create an effective instructional approach that uses both recursive activities to develop literacy skills. From the Essential Question and unit topic to reading an array of literary and informational texts and responding through writing or speaking activities, students develop literacy skills, increase their language proficiency, and build knowledge. | Amplify ELA's text sets are sequenced so that students build knowledge and vocabulary across the year and into subsequent grades. All texts (including both fiction and informational text) cover a wide range of subject areas, from classic to contemporary, including the history of the California gold rush, China's Cultural Revolution, the short stories of Edgar Allan Poe, the artwork of Frida Kahlo and Diego Rivera,, and the workings of the human brain. In all cases, core texts meet the complexity criteria for each grade and have been sequenced to create a "staircase" of steadily increasing complexity as measured by quantitative measures, qualitative measures, and task considerations while building knowledge. | Houghton Mifflin Harcourt (HMH) offers Raytown C-2 School District HMH Into Literature for their Grade 7 English Language Arts adoption. HMH celebrates people of all backgrounds and wants to support the District's mission of raising awareness and fostering cultural competency while leading individuals to achieve the exceptional. Captivating, culturally relevant fiction and nonfiction selections are the keystones of HMH Into Literature. Reading, writing, speaking and listening, language and grammar, and thinking skills are all taught in context and supported by the program's authentic literature while providing unmatched teacher guidance along the way. The program features culturally responsive practices and texts, small-group options for every text selection, and an integrated reading and writing instructional model that utilizes authentic Mentor Texts. High-quality, complex texts make up each multi-unit genre, and each unit provides numerous opportunities for students to write about, talk about, think about, and reflect on their learning. | StudySync is a comprehensive, twenty-first century solution for grades six to twelve English Language Arts. StudySync's program was built from the ground up to fully align with the CCSS and state standards for English Language Arts. StudySync helps create the context for achievement by providing a curriculum and platform which allows teachers to construct courses that are engaging, motivating, respectful, integrated, and intellectually challenging. |
